Did You Know?

A house cat's genome is 95.6 percent tiger, and they share many behaviors with their jungle ancestors.

Tori (now Penny) Doing Great!

“Her appetite and energy are fantastic, she loves to play, and she loves her brother Nova! She cuddles up to him and licks him.”

Star & Sushi, first day at home!

Sushi and Star have taken over!

“Sushi and Star have found their afternoon catnap spot!
Thanks again for helping us choose just the right additions to our family!”

Remember Kitt? He came to Paws a year ago when his owner moved to a place that did not allow pets. He was adopted in August and seems to have made himself at home!

Gomez is doing great, right at home

Mittens (now General) is a happy boy

“General (formerly Mittens) is doing great! He has pretty much taken over the place and I just work for him now! He really enjoys being cuddled and petted so bedtime is his favorite. He finally can lock me down in one place and get his belly rubbed before is 15th nap of the day.

He's still a bit skittish around new people but with me he's in love and honestly I am too. I never really thought of myself as a cat person, but this little guy has changed me forever. Bring on the kitties! It's going so well, I have been debating on fostering other cats to see if he'd be happy with a playmate or if he is content being the star of the show.”

Sparkle doing great in foster!

“I wanted to let people know how well Sparkle is doing! He is really starting to warm up and truly become one of the family. He spends very little time hiding out in the closet and has adopted a favorite spot in the living room in a warming kitty bed that Turtle so graciously gave up to him. I am happy to report that he now jumps up on the bed for head pets and will lay with me for a bit. He is doing this almost daily in the morning.

He and Turtle are actually pretty good buds and they play with each other and Turtle attempts to groom him but usually gives up after a few licks! Eloise has even warmed up to him and they tolerate each other but I caught them bumping noses the other day so there is still hope for love! He is still a finicky eater and sometimes spits his meds out but all in all I would venture to say he is pretty happy here!” (Thank you Leslie!)

“Henry is lovely and has settled right into our home. He is scheduled for his annual physical next week. He loves laps and ping-pong balls. He is always in the room where his people are and very rarely away alone.

I have a lot of pictures, this one is Henry just being elegant. We are very happy with our most recent family addition, and I believe he is happy too.”

A Cat's Sleeping Position Can Tell You What They're Thinking

#1) Curled Up Cat: A cat that's curled up with their tail in a graceful swoop around their body and their head tucked in toward their chest is doing their best to conserve body heat and protect vulnerable organs. Your cat's wild cousins do it, and it's a natural instinct even the most pampered house cat can't suppress. A curled up cat usually wants to be left alone.

Fluffy (now Noah) is living the good life!

Creamsicle (now Marty) Checks In!

“We are so blessed to have our new Marty (alias Creamsicle) who we adopted last week. He's great and is making himself quite at home! He has even licked our big Groucho cat, a stray who we adopted a few years ago. Keep up the great work at PAWS!”

Nope, Granite isn't spoiled at all!

Teddy is now huge and very adorable!

“Teddy is doing great! You wouldn’t recognize him. He’s the size of a lion!”

Former bottle baby Cindy

Sausage (now Cash) is King!

“Cash is doing great! Vaccines and vet visits are up to date. He has grown so much! We even had a bday party when he turned one.”

#2) Cat in a Box: There’s no doubting it’s cute, but it also sends a message about your cat’s sense of safety and comfort. Cats seek out small spaces because they make them feel safe. A box with four solid walls where your cat can squeeze their mass into is the perfect form of security. Cats that live in active households with children or other animals may seek out a box, drawer, or other kind of hidey-hole to settle down for a deep, (hopefully) uninterrupted sleep.

I can't get enough of Zeus and Jackson!

Behold my awesome belly - then fix me dinner!

I caught my own dinner!

And I manage the office too.

Updates w/o Photos:

“Josie is doing great! I'm spoiling her rotten. She thinks she should get treats when Maddie gets one. Of course she gets one. She loves to sit on my lap especially when I'm wearing my cozy pink robe and sleeps on me every night. She's so sweet and cute it's never-ending. I LOVE her.

I tell her all the time that I'm so glad I got her. Things are good with her and Maddie although she has been known to jump out at Maddie and scare her to death. I don't have any pics of her that adequately reflect her cuteness but will try to get one to you soon.”
